Q:
Using a class c++ I'm new to using classes, and I'm confused on how to add an instance of a class into an array of classes. I have a class called Student, and another called Course, which has a vector of Students, which has a vector of Courses. In my main function I want to do something like this: Students S(10); Course C(S, 100, "Computer Science"); Course C(S, 100, "Music"); Course C(S, 100, "Math"); Course C(S, 100, "Chemistry"); Course C(S, 100, "Physics"); Course C(S, 100, "Earth Science"); Course C(S, 100, "English");

But, I'm not sure how to make a new Student object. When I do it like this, it's not working Students S(10); Course C("Computer Science", 100, "Math"); Course C("Earth Science", 100, "Math"); Course C("Physics", 100, "Math"); button below (for some versions it may take a couple of minutes): “This is a first for the federal government,” said Christine Levinson, a senior research associate at the Manhattan Institute who has studied municipal pension reform. The negotiations started in February. Now, the plan is closer to reality. “It’s a credit to the state and local governments and to the labor unions in particular,” Ms. Levinson said. “The state is actually putting together a really good plan — and a plan they can truly get behind.” No one knows if the plan will pass. After 16 years of haggling, the minds of lawmakers have changed dramatically. State government faces an almost insolvent $11 billion deficit in 2010-11, while the municipal pension system, which is financed entirely through payroll taxes, is 14.5 percent underfunded. The pension system could take a $3 billion hit if the state has to start levying the full 7 percent of the salaries of state workers. “When I took this office, this was
