Conectado | Recargando | Disconectado.Q: d3.csv() for files that have newlines that are not escaped This is a d3.csv() question. I'm not sure if this is an issue with d3.csv() or if it's an issue with Firefox and the d3.csv() function. I have a file of data that I'm loading using d3.csv. I'm not sure how to set the "sep" parameter such that the new lines are not escaped. I've tried using " " and this works fine, but then this does not work: d3.csv("D:\\TEST\\Data\\test.csv", function(rows) { } I also tried passing "test.csv" as the "file" parameter (which I've also read would normally handle new lines)

Raul Di Blasio - Discography [21 CD] (1983-2008)

CD. Raul Di Blasio - Discography [21 CD] (1983-2008) -- f40dba8b6f Raul Di Blasio born on 14 November 1949 in Fuse,Â .The SEC has charged two former executives at Network Solutions, the company that provides domain name registration services, for fraud and other charges related to the company's role as an important online currency for cyber criminals who steal credit card data. The Securities and Exchange Commission filed a federal lawsuit today against Network Solutions, its CEO, Michael Long, and two former executives, Jeffrey Charles Sia, the company's former chief operating officer and chief financial officer, and Michael Bradley, the former vice president of business development, for allegedly engaging in fraud and other offenses in connection with Network Solutions' domain name registration services. The SEC alleges that Sia and Long conspired to perpetrate a scheme in which Sia would extort higher-than-usual billing fees and commissions for Network Solutions' domain name registration services, in exchange for giving Sia and his co-conspirators priority status for the domains "digitalriver.com" and "paypal.com," which previously were available on the market for $10,000 a year. Today's lawsuit alleges that from at least December 2007 through September 2009, Sia and Long discussed how Sia could obtain priority status for the domains. The lawsuit says that Sia told Long he was interested in obtaining the priority for the domains because it would give him special access to the domains, which could be beneficial to Sia's then-significant assets in online gambling, and that it would assist him in selling the domains. In 2009, the lawsuit says, Sia demanded payments and then used his position at Network Solutions to enforce his demands, charging all of the company's customers multiple times for services he had not provided. In addition, the lawsuit alleges that Sia and Long did not truthfully disclose in Network Solutions' financial statements Sia's scheme to receive priority status for the domains. "We allege that in order to expand their businesses, Network Solutions and its CEO and executives devised a scheme to defraud customers by providing preferential registration service for domains that included the name of one of their competitors," said Lynne L. Mizel, co-director of the SEC's enforcement division. "They falsely claimed they were providing special services 3e33713323
