“The power and impact of an aerial duel is immediately evident as the player's body responds to the on-ball actions,” said Jake Lynch, Vice President of FIFA. “Every move and action the player makes in training can now be fed into the game through FIFA's ‘HyperMotion’ technology, which allows players to perform their individual on-ball moves more fluidly, as if they were actually playing the match.” [FIFA 20] FIFA 20 introduced the Powerwall, which provides gamers with a persistent energy source during gameplay. The Powerwall ensures that a player can play an entire game (not just a set number of matches) without suffering from fatigue and being unable to play the full match. The Powerwall can also provide an additional boost when a player is running on empty during a match. “The Powerwall is a real game changer,” said Michael Cole, Head of Club Development and Operations at EA

SPORTS. “It provides a significant strategic advantage by ensuring the energy levels of a player are never depleted, even during a long, hectic game. It’s a massive leap forward in technology, enhancing the player experience and making the entire FIFA experience more meaningful. We can now create a living, breathing soccer game that delivers a comprehensive and authentic experience.”

Fan Interactive The Fan Interactives feature in FIFA provides more options for players to customise their experience and engage with the game and broader FIFA community. For the first time, players can choose the boots and shirt they want to play in, based on their favourite clubs’ visual style. Furthermore, players can use the new 3D Apparel Creation tool to create their own customised attire. To help players create their dream outfit, there are thousands of pre-selected designs available for any position and unique assets such as shoes, socks and pants to help create the perfect look. The ‘Try Me’ feature is also returning from FIFA 18 and with it, players can now change their player style to fit their play style, from complete control to speed, directness, balance and more. [FIFA 18]

FIFA 18 introduced ‘Ball Position Control’, which allows players to control exactly where they want

What's new:

- Assists, dribbles, and player decisions - Improved engine technologies and improvements to performance deliver more accurate and responsive behaviours for the players.
- Additive layer of control - Real-world player movements and behaviour aren't fixed; but changing the timing of a player's movement can slow down or speed up how fast they react to the pitch, get back to their feet, or perform other on-ball actions. The inertia and energy of real-world movement can affect how the game plays; a player may make a less confident run, use a different cut, or steer their player in the direction they're going. This technology also provides the tools to let players make reflex decisions: dribble to beat a defender, shoot on goal, use a header to beat the goalkeeper, even flip the ball over your head to lob the keeper.
- Personal player styles - Create your ultimate team and inject a player's unique style on their appearance, their player traits, and more. Want to stick to your roots? You can introduce authentic player personas to your Ultimate Team; or choose player traits associated with your club, country, or other club you're about to create. Improving the overall quality of player movement also allows for new levels of creativity and oddball skills.
- Impact Engine - Get rewarded for playing with your friends, within social systems - clubs, tournaments, or individual players, as EA Sports brings the best parts of the best FIFA experiences into the way you play. From matchmaking and league play, to annual tournaments, there's a place for everyone to engage with the game, and be part of the biggest party on PlayStation 4.
- FIFA Ultimate Team Season Journey - Fresh faces, unique nicknames, and even a corresponding player name to go with your crested jersey—who wouldn't want that? Get exclusive rewards as you progress through each stage, and look forward to more chances to earn rank icons, player cards, and face painting options as you work your way up.
- Improved gameplay experience through 16 improved team
