I am finally back from a trip to New York, and the caravan is happening with $40 gas, and back for me in the car and who knows how far it was for the rest of the group. I doubt it is far enough. I am wondering what the temperature will be in the mountains, or is it going to be hot and sticky? And I am just learning that the show does not open until 11:30am, so we would probably be shooting for 10:00am. I'll probably bring a book, and my knitting needles! I can make a scarf, or a pot holder, or I could even make my boyfriend's socks. I thought he was pretty sick with my new socks, but I know that for others, they aren't so over the top. Well, to your question on what to bring; I brought my hair dryer, my pillow case, a pillow, an incense burner, my knitting needles, my dish, my sunglasses, my earplugs, a snack, and my knitting book. I just brought the remainder of my necessities, maybe some more yarn and cotton. 7 comments: Oh I'm so excited! I can only imagine the yummy-ness of this show - I hope you'll be able to hang out with us! :) I'd bring a good book to read, too. I, too, will be making socks for my boyfriend. The runs he gets from his office co-workers are nothing like any I've ever had. They should call

Beijer Ix Developer Serial Number!

The OBAE is a half-scale replica of a SEAT Muntada. Designed and built by Peter J. Beijer, the OBAE is powered by a single rubber belt unit from a VW Type 2 engine. Two arrangements of belt pulleys are used to convert the power from the engine into two four wheel drive drivetrains. The drivetrains are in-wheel electric motors that drive individual rear wheels. The main drive train uses four PMEFS 490K series motors, mounted to an axle behind the driver's seat. The second, optional, drivetrain uses four FLAME-RX 1AW electric motors, mounted to the rear of the passenger's seat. The engine and electric motors have a combined output of.

Q: Modelling while checking for serialization nulls in a DTO I was wondering if I could get some direction on an issue that I am working on right now. I have a DTO for a domain object. Here is a simplified version of my DTO: `public class OrderDTO { public string OrderID { get; set; } public float Quantity { get; set; } public decimal Amount { get; set; } }` I know this is bad modeling since there can be two values for OrderID and Quantity. Anyhow, as you can see OrderID and Quantity are used in different places in the system. I am trying to create a DTO that could be used in both places to minimize duplication of data. I am having a lot of trouble however. In order to make sure the OrderID and Quantity is not null, a few places in the system I end up with this: `if(OrderDTO!= null) { if(OrderDTO.OrderID == null) { OrderDTO.OrderID = "someID"; } }` This seems like a very roundabout way of doing things, however every time I have a null in the OrderID it throws an ArgumentException in one or two places in the system. This is due to the fact that it was serialized over and over again. What I want to do is basically have a simple method on my DTO that I can run like this:

```
OrderDTO DTO = new OrderDTO(); DTO.6d1f23a050
```
